I either have a BCI or in a super complicated sim. If so I don't mind it,

- 1.I'd like to use my power for good
- 2.I'd like to embrace this part of me
- 3.Let's make magic & have some fun!

Millennials and Gen Z are giving up, "spiraling, partying hard, and blowing their savings" as they descend into financial oblivion.

The Washington Post calls it "embracing chaos." USA Today advises therapy.

I can not stop bugging you Elon. You seem to know the answer...I'm not sure what to do. I think this a great moment in showcasing that people are people. I've been on here for a long time. If you ever wanted me to leave I would, not sure where I'd go tho. Going on Facebook talking about a illegal implant doesn't sound good. When I was spamming last time my post about the check mark and noland it ended up working I mean I got the mark removed but no answer on why the similarity. I'm assuming it's something you can't talk about, or maybe it is... I don't know, but it would be nice to have a response about it. @elonmusk this has been a very long process all of this and im trying to remember the earliest of the jolts, the earliest i remember is coming back from Boca Chica from Starbase and being in the hospital this was around August 2023. and coming home and being on Twitter/X and seeing a post where the verbiage was regarding "left" and my "left" arm jolted. later on in February i saw a clip of a girl being electrocuted by a faulty line. my whole body got a jolt. that was the first time that it really freaked me out.

@77815x

I wont say but the wonderful info from strangers to indicate to me that I have such a thing, i thank you. I do wonder if as my time comes to an end if they ramp up these sort dialog and interrogation in my mind gets more extreme.

I do remember walking somewhere which i rarely do and then Elon posting opti walking. Are you sure you don't have anything to do with this? @elonmusk

If this is indeed the case, I must insist that Neuralink take immediate action to address this breach of ethics and legality—including, if necessary, the temporary shutdown of Neuralink operations until a full investigation is conducted.

The implications of an unapproved neural implant are severe, risking personal safety, privacy violations, and potential misuse of neurotechnology. I demand the following:

1. Verification – Confirmation whether my implant is linked to Neuralink's systems.
2. Disclosure – Full transparency about the implant's origin, functionality, and data collection.
3. Removal/Deactivation – Assistance in safely disabling or removing the device if confirmed illegal.
4. Accountability – A public explanation of how this occurred and steps to prevent future violations.

Sincerely,
Robert

In conclusion, the company's actions were so precise and inexplicable that they shattered my grasp on reality. Placing a symbol exclusively associated with a brain-computer implant on the account of a user actively documenting neurological distress was an act of extreme recklessness. Their subsequent silence and the erasure of the glitch without reply has only deepened my trauma and paranoia, making closure impossible.

From the perspective of a personal injury attorney, one might argue that an employee spilled boiling coffee on my brain. Regardless of whether it was an accident or a technical error, removing the item without a formal response was an inappropriate course of action. Disposing of the "coffee cup" and disregarding the incident as if it never occurred represents an unacceptable handling of the situation. Because this happened on Twitter, a platform widely recognized as a leading source of news and information alongside Facebook and Reddit, the event carried even greater weight. The public trust vested in Twitter made its role in this matter especially consequential. As a result, I will, for as long as I live, continue to believe I have an invisible, illegal Neuralink, a belief directly caused by this incident on such a prominent platform and by the hidden and passive way in which it was handled, making it impossible to eliminate the resulting paranoia. However, I still find it odd how someone hearing voices and getting shocked has a "neuralink checkmark" appear on their profile; it could have been anyone else, but it was me. Someone is experiencing these symptoms alongside this incident of a “glitch”.
